

Promoting the enjoyment, knowledge and benefits of gardens and gardening

Open Gardens South Australia Welcomes you to Heritage Rose Garden

Sunday 3rd November, 2024

Today we are opening the garden in honour of our dear Walter, who passed away in July of this year. He was the mastermind behind this garden and put all his rose growing and horticultural skills into creating his life's dream.

This year being a dry one has had its challenges. However, the roses are still blooming spectacularly, and the whole of the garden has a vibrant feel due to the recent rain.

Our garden is approximately 5 ha in area and encompasses a quince orchard, a labyrinth. Please take time to enjoy all its many spaces and sit and enjoy our musicians, Tamarisque, along with the great food and stalls here today.

We started this garden in the year 2000, before we finished building our home. The first trees we planted were the poplars, and they were meant to be the edge of the garden! Needless to say, we were not to be stopped. With ever increasing enthusiasm we continued collecting ideas and plants and the results now speak for themselves. We are primarily a rambling garden, but with a specialty for roses, as roses were Walter's life and passion (apart from me!)

We managed to site the house close to existing fig and Walnut trees, to give the feel of an old established garden. The plums along the creek were already here too and the old pear trees. Walter also loved silver birch trees, and our best specimen can be seen by our back verandah.

We have many different soil types in our garden, mostly all alluvial, and there are some sandy patches that have been quite a challenge. The southern boundary of the front garden has been our hardest soil to manage. Many of the roses that we first planted there did not survive, so we have had to resort to hardier perennials and some shrubs, even after trying to enrich and restore the soil to better health. This is partly due to the gum trees extended roots for the road. The Gillentown Rd boundary has now become a wild garden that has special appeal when the roses are in bloom and the Echium sends up its blue spires.

Our garden now has many sections. Don't miss the French rose beds that are such a treat on a warm morning when the perfume of the roses greets the warmth of the morning. It is just spectacular.

The herb garden at the end of the crab-apple walk provide us with some produce and more delightful fragrance, and the new moon gate and wisteria arch will be a delight in a few years, when it really takes off. If you can take the time to walk the meditative walk of the Labyrinth, you might just feel grounded and centered again! Its such a peaceful space, and will be more-so when the trees in this garden get larger.

The raised vegie beds give us our daily quota of greens and the quince orchard has the best blooms in early spring. Some of our quinces are made in paste. We have been supplying the local tourist info centre and some wineries.

The old-world roses that you can see throughout the garden are the highlight of The Heritage Garden at this time of the year. They are so happy when they have the space to grow as nature would desire and climb and ramble over fences, up trees and droop and ramble as they please. We are so lucky to have the space to allow this to happen, as some of these varieties would be very hard to manage in a small garden.

We truly hope that you enjoy your day here and that you take away a little piece of inspiration to help create a paradise in your own garden. Walter loved sharing the garden with all his visitors and we plan to continue with his legacy.

Thank you for visiting,
Kay Duncan
